

Ensure the compliant enforcement of electrical safety in your jurisdiction with NAPIT

CPD Training

All local authorities must ensure the competence of their inspectors so that they are capable of exercising the powers granted to them under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974. A basic understanding of electrical safety principles, however, is valuable to everyone in your enforcement team.

Basic Electrical Safety Course

This half day course is designed to provide a general overview of the electrical safety issues commonly encountered by members of the public, including electrical installation faults and common misconceptions. Find out about:

- Competent persons
- District Network Operators
- Consumer units
- And how to carry out visual electrical checks with confidence
- Earthing and bonding
- Ring mains
- Socket, radials

Electrical Installation Condition Report (EICR) Awareness

This course provides a detailed insight into the Electrical Installation Condition Report (EICR), including understanding and interpreting compliance codes and the factors that make an installation safe.

- Expert guidance on report interpretation
- A step-by-step insight into EICR completion
- Develop the skills to effectively judge compliance
- Advice on the common issues to identify
- Practical exercise on visual coding faults
- Gain the knowledge to carry out visual electrical checks with confidence

All attendees will receive a certificate of attendance for their records, which can be used as proof of continued professional development.
